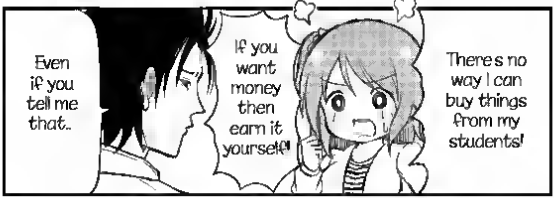
Education Nonconforming

Wha-!?
If you have this, I bet it'll be easier to start a conversation with the boys in our class.
Asahina-sensei, If you'd like I'll sell you the deck I was using for 1,000 yen.



To go to a coming of age ceremony while fully aware of the situation you put yourself in... How insane are you...
Even going to my coming of age ceremony was pretty embarrassing you know
My academic background only goes up to kindergarten.

TLN: In Japan there's something called the Coming of Age Day. It's a holiday held annually on the second Monday of January. It is held in order to congratulate and encourage all those who have reached the age of majority (20 years old) over the past year and to help them realize that they have become adults. Celebrations are also often held between friends and family.
